0:03
Californians can recycle their empty
0:06
wine and liquor containers and get paid 0:09
for it California's welcome the new year 0:11
with new additions to the recycling 0:13
program that's kept nearly a half 0:15
trillion beverage containers off our 0:17
streets and out of our landfills our 0:19
beverage container recycling program
0:21
just expanded to include uh wine bottles
0:24
and distilled Spirit bottles more 0:26
containers now eligible for Redemption
0:29
so anything under 24 ounces is 5 cents
0:32
anything over 24 ounces is 10 cents and 0:35
then for those wine in a box or pouch if 0:39
it's still intact you can get 25 cents
0:42
for that 0:48
container helping California's do more 0:50
to fight climate and trash pollution one 0:53
of the great things about glass is it's 0:55
100% infinitely recyclable when we 0:57
recycle uh materials it turns into 1:00
something new with a lot less water a

1:03

lot less energy a lot less of those new

1:05

Resources with these changes California

1:07

expects a billion new containers to

1:09

enter the program each year to help

1:11

simplify recycling for consumers and get

1:13

more recycled material to California

1:16

manufacturers and they can do it over

1:17

and over and over again because they are

1:20

taking those used wine bottles recycling

1:22

them and turning them into new glass

1:24

this is really exciting I think for

1:25

California and I think something that we

1:27

have been waiting for for a while
